Program description

The Department of Management strives to expand managerial knowledge and capabilities vital for today's complex and dynamic world. By integrating high-impact research and experience-based education, faculty add value to practice and theory. Experience-based education is also vital to Management - where the only sustainable advantage is the ability to learn. Hands-on learning occurs in field cases examining non-profit firms and new ventures, in studies abroad exploring cultural differences, and in experiential exercises accentuating intricacies of human and group behavior.

Wherever your future career ambitions lie, a management degree from AIU will encourage you to think critically and creatively about management practice. You will gain an all-round understanding of how organizations and managers operate in a global environment while also developing analytical, problem solving and interpersonal skills that are attractive to employers. You will join a friendly and supportive department with an active student society.

You will learn about management practice, organization theory, and the global business environment, as well as specific functions like accounting and marketing. Our wide range of optional units means you will be able to personalize your degree to reflect your interests and career ambitions in areas such as strategy, business law, HRM and finance. Many of our units contain an international dimension to reflect the global nature of business.
